COOKTOWN

Cook, Wujal Wujal and Hope Vale council staff are boosting their skills in water treatment with an industry qualification, hosted by Cook Shire Council.

Staff from all three councils are completing a Certificate III in Water Industry Treatment (Specialisation: Drinking Water), which focuses on water treatment, but also covers activated sludge, rotator biological contactor and lagoon wastewater treatment technology specific to each council.

The course is an 18-24 month course which will boost operators' skills and technical knowledge to assist with efficient and effective plant operation, troubleshooting and occupational health and safety and legislative requirements.
